

Home > News & Opinion > Columnists >  RSS Feed

 E-mail article

 Graphic version

 Most popular

Darst: Friends, enemies and parking tickets

By Guy Darst

Friday, July 21, 2006

Two economists from Columbia University and the University of California at Berkeley have found that unpaid New York City parking tickets by diplomats correlate strongly with the degree of dislike of the United States in polls of the home country population.

Interestingly, unpaid tickets also correlated with corruption in the home country, but not significantly with whether the home country was Moslem.

Traditional diplomatic immunity meant that nothing could happen to diplomats who didn't pay their tickets. This infuriated New Yorkers burdened by in-your-face parking habits of more than 1,700 members of missions to the United Nations from 146 countries. Congress did enact what appear to have been effective reforms.

All along, some well-mannered countries have paid any tickets their diplomats racked up, or made them park legally. According to the study by Columbia's Ray Fisman and Berkeley's Edward Miguel of tickets issued in New York from 1997 through 2002, diplomats from these countries had no unpaid tickets at all -- Britain, the Netherlands, Denmark, Greece, Ireland, Latvia, Norway, Sweden, Canada, Israel, Australia, Japan, the United Arab Emirates, Turkey, Oman, Jamaica, Columbia, Panama, Ecuador, Azerbaijan, Burkina Faso and the Central African Republic. Note the number of traditional American friends.

Russia's 86 New York diplomats, the largest foreign contingent, accumulated only two tickets per person each year. Germany averaged one. France had six, Spain 13 and Italy 15.

Here's the "dirty dozen" -- countries with the most: Kuwait, 246 per person per year; Egypt, 140; Chad, 124; Sudan, 119; Bulgaria, 118; Mozambique, 111; Albania, 85; Senegal, 79; Pakistan, 69; Ivory Coast, 67; Zambia, 60.

What contempt from some ostensible friends -- on the average, each of nine Kuwaitis caught a ticket almost every working day; each of the 24 Egyptians caught one every other working day.

In 2002, Congress passed a law deducting the amount of unpaid fines from any foreign aid allocations, giving the money to New York City, and giving the city the right to tow offending cars and seize their diplomatic parking permits. Unpaid tickets fell from about 3,100 per month to about 50.

No doubt New Yorkers are pleased. But we wonder: What else are these less-than-tactful diplomats getting away with?

Guy Darst writes for the Boston Herald.

 E-mail article

 Graphic version

 Most popular

Today's most read articles Updated 3:30 PM ET

1. Police log from Monday, July 24, 2006(1918)
2. The need for speed(1360)
3. Sunglass thief robs Natick Mall store(1208)
4. Red Sox notebook: Sox ride out Nixon slump(925)
5. Regional calendar(922)

Search the site

Herald Interactive Tools

Related articles

E-mail article to a friend

Graphic version

Get RSS feed

Search site

Sign up for home delivery

Enterprise-level broadband service provided by Expedient: America's Largest All-Ethernet Network

Wireless broadband service provided by Towerstream

[contact us] :: [print advertising] :: [online advertising] :: [Browser Upgrade] :: [Jobs]

Order Home Delivery Online: Weekly papers Daily papers or call 1.800.982.4023

© Copyright of GateHouse Media and Herald Interactive, Inc.

No portion of townonline.com or its content may be reproduced without the owner's written permission. Privacy Commitment

bh.heralddinteractive.com: 0.008901:Mon, 24 Jul 2006 19:40:48 GMT cached